

FAQs: Credits

Q: How many credits do I need before I can apply as a transfer student to Emory University?

A: You need a minimum of 28 credit hours of college work, which does not include AP or IB credit.

Q: Will Emory University take all of my college coursework if I am accepted?

A: We will review your official transcripts with the required accompanying descriptions of courses from your institution's course catalog only after you have been accepted. If the class description is similar to what we offer here at Emory, that course will count towards Emory graduation credit. We will award a maximum of 64 credit hours. To graduate from Emory, you must complete 64 credit hours on the Emory campus.

Emory's course catalog can be found here: www.emory.edu/college/catalog

Q: Who determines if my credits are transferrable?

A: Professional staff in the Undergraduate Office of Admission and in the Emory College Office determines what courses will transfer and the number of credits awarded.

Q: When will I receive an evaluation of my transferrable credits?

A: Credit evaluations are completed AFTER a student has been admitted to Emory College. Evaluations are emailed to students.

Q: Will I receive credits for AP, IB, or A-Level exams?

A: If you have an official score report sent directly from the College Board or appropriate testing agency, we will award college credit for the exam scores we accept.
