

The University of New Haven has a rolling admissions process. This means that students can apply for admission at any time throughout the year and receive a decision shortly after submission of all required materials.

Although there is not a particular deadline, it is recommended that students apply as early as possible since space in some of our academic programs tend to fill up quickly. Typically, the Office of Undergraduate Admissions begins to review applications as early as September 1 for admission the following fall.

Students have the option of applying directly to the major of their choice or applying as undeclared. Applications for admission are considered complete and will be reviewed once the following materials are received:

1. Application - Students can apply with the UNH Application for Undergraduate Admission, the Common Application, or the Universal Application. the most convenient way to apply is online using any of the three forms; however, students can fill out our paper copy and mail it to:

Office of Undergraduate Admissions
University of New Haven
300 Boston Post Road
West Haven, CT 06516

Apply online and save 50% on the application fee.

Please note that equal consideration is given for admission to students who submit the UNH Application, Common Application, or Universal Application.

6. Transfer students have the option to submit a personal essay and at least one letter of recommendation.

Transfer Credit

Transfer credits are evaluated at the time of application, and students will receive a preliminary transfer credit evaluation with their acceptance letter. The academic department to which the student applied will make a final determination of transfer credits. Evaluation of transfer credit is based on the following criteria:

- Credit for the course must have been earned at a regionally accredited institution.
- Course grade must be a "C" or better. Credit is not awarded for pass/fail courses.
- Students may transfer a maximum of 60 credits from two-year institutions and a maximum of 90 credits from four-year institutions. A student's final 30 credits must be earned in residency at UNH.
- Remedial, technical, and vocational courses do not transfer to the University of New Haven.
- Only a student's credits transfer to the University of New Haven. Grade point average (GPA) does not transfer. Transfer students begin a new GPA at the University of New Haven.

Additional Information

The University recognizes the College Entrance Examination Board's Advanced Placement Program (AP), the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) and the International Baccalaureate (IB). Please send official test scores or transcripts to:
